

The Dr. Susan E. Keefe Practicing Anthropology Award

Each year the Department of Anthropology may award one or more students the Dr. Susan E. Keefe Practicing Anthropology Award. This award, which includes a small cash stipend, recognizes students who contribute and/or have the potential to contribute in a significant way to solving problems using anthropological theories and methods. This can include volunteer work in communities and other extra-curricular activities as well as participation in research, internships, laboratories, or fieldwork courses that make a contribution to real world practice.

Scholarship award will be given to students majoring in a subfield of anthropology who have achieved significant merit in practicing anthropology and have plans for future application of anthropology in the real world. Examples are applied research project, community outreach, formal internship, extraordinary experience.

Application should include:

1. Curriculum vitae (c.v.) or resume
2. A note giving us permission to review your transcript.
3. A letter (approximately two pages single spaced) that describes in full your practice of anthropology (as described above). The letter should address how your study of anthropology has contributed to this practice.

Applications are due by February 21, 2020, 5:00PM in hard copy to Dr. Timothy J. Smith, Chair
